Mission Statement: (Source: 2004 Program Review Materials)

The Department of Entomology's graduate program seeks to educate students in all facets of professional development. Students combine classroom and independent studies with experiential learning in many aspects of professional life including classroom teaching, multimedia software development of instructional materials, public science education talks, collection curation, biodiversity studies, hosting visiting speakers, and designing departmental retreats. Many other types of activities have been designed and developed by individuals according to their own unique backgrounds and interests. Our goal is to provide the optimum individualized educational experience for graduate students according to their own unique backgrounds, interests, and career directions.
